"Yes, interfering with city work," replied Mr. Lynch.
Mr. Jones said that he went to the office at 9 A. M., but reported to no one. If he went out to stay all day he left a note on his desk. He stated that he did not pay contractors before they had finished their work.
He was questioned closely as to the amount of time he gave to city work. He replied that he spent sic months of his time attending to the parks and the rest in office work, drawing plans and lines and in supervising outside work. "Aren't there times you don't have work, after the park work is done?" he was asked.
"I am not often in such a position," he replied. "Sometimes there is a lapse of half an hour or so. A other times there is more than you can do. But in any office of this kind there are times when one might not have anything to do for the moment. It is different from a day laborer's job. I have put in more open time than I have loafed in the office."

Then came the usual request of the state of the content o

One Suggestion.

Then came the usual request for suggestions for improvement. He said he would like to see the Engineering Department brought up to the efficiency of other departments, but thought that Council would not be willing to appropriate the necessary money.

when it meets at the Governor's office to-night to apportion the military funds among the different commands. It is anticipated that at least represent as the service will be present, asking the board to double the appropriation for maintaining the artillery equipment and for instruction of the men. Heretofore, this amount has been $1,000 a year for each of the three batteries in Virginia, and efforts will be made, it is understood, to have this increased to $2,000 per battery.

A bill was offered in the Legislature at its last session requiring this apportionment to be made, but it never reached a vote. Much opposition was met, principally on the ground that, according to military usage, the authorities should have passed on the matter before any such action was taken.

Want Naval Reserve.

Other matters are expected to come before the meeting. One of these is the application of the proposed naval reserve corps of Norfolk to be mustered into the Virginia service. It is understood that opposition to this may be aroused on the ground that the cost is great and that no compensatory advantage to the State would result.

Also, one more request may be made of the people of Norfolk to hand over that deed for the State would result.

P. P. Tallaferro was then called. Like the others, he had a written statement, giving an account of the work he performs. He said that very often he had to give grades twice, mostly owing to the carelessness of contractors, and that he was hard pressed for time. He had received a complaint from I. J. Smith, whose work he had not had time to check up. He said that he had been in office twenty-three years, and that he had been under whip and spur all the time. He agreed that conditions might be remedied.

"The only trouble," he said, "Is that there has been an insufficient force. All have been under a constant strain. We have no time to keep up records, and it takes a long time to look up old records." When asked if there were any suggestions for improvement the could give, he replied that he wouldn't like to make them offnand. It was impossible to explain all the details of the office work, he said, and that nobody could answer all the questions asked by people who came into the office. The committee laughed. He dwelt on the insufficiency of the force, and thought it would be advisable to put some one in the office to give information to seekers after knowledge. He said that attempts had been made to remedy conditions. As to further suggestions for improvement he would like to think more about them before offering them to the committee.

Mr. Bolling interrupted. "No one man, nor, five men, working every day in the year," he said, "can get up the records in that office, and to get up profiles and grades of all the streets in the city would take more than a year. But the work is being properly recorded."

Suggests Division.

Mr. Don Leavy suggested that the work of the department be divided according to districts, instead of class, but Mr. Taliaferro appeared doubtful. Mr. Lynch evidently thought the witness was prone to avoid direct answers, for he told him not to feel any delicacy in responding and offering suggestions because of the presence of Mr. Bolling. He was told to give thought to the matter, so that he could offer suggestions when called upon.

AROUND THE HOTELS

"You newspaper fellows see to it that you get the credit for rapid work," was the general comment of the Richmond hotel clerks yesterday, They thought something might be said also of the way their own telephone operators worked on election night.

"Your expert information disseminators haven't anything on us," said one of them. "You ought to have seen us. Every drummer, as well as hundreds of local visitors, wanted to know all about it, and, because the drummer's viewpoint is wider than that of the ordinary citizen, most of them have been in many States during the campaign and were interested in a wide range of results. They bombarded the telephone operators with questions, and the content of the conte
